Treasures in Tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen of Egypt

London Times-New York Times copyright by arrangement with Earl of Carnarvon.

Opening of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the "heretic" King of the Eighteenth Egyptian dynasty, at Luxor, has revealed an unexampled storehouse of treasures. This photograph gives a view of the antechamber looking west. Among the articles shown are a box containing the king's undergarments and other things; a large gilded couch with supports in the form of lions; a couch with supports in the form of "hat-hor" cows; numerous boxes containing mummified meat; a painted red box containing jewelry and ornaments; a papyrus rush-work stool, much decayed; the king's stool; another couch; four alabaster unguent vases of unique type and beauty; a semi-circular veneered box having minute detail of inlaid ivory.

G. W. Maue Writes About Sea Voyage

The News-Bulletin is in receipt of an interesting communication from G. W. Maue of Mokena who has been on a trip to the Canal Zone, Panama. The letter is here-with subjoined:

At Sea, January 21, 1923

After spending four days in New York, visiting places of interest under the guidance of my nephew, I left there at 2 o'clock p. m., January 20th, on the Pacific Mail S. S. Venezuela for Los Angeles. On reaching the Atlantic, the ship took up her regulation speed of twelve knots per hour, with that steady rolling motion which was comforting to some, and brought misery to others. Saturday night and Sunday many were ill, and it was several days before all recovered. On leaving New York, ear muffs, overcoats and exercise were needed for comfort. Sunday overcoats were in use, but Monday these were put aside. Wednesday summer clothing was in use, and summer temperature has prevailed since.

The coast of New Jersey was visible Saturday evening, but thereafter no land was seen except a few small islands of the Bahama group, until we approached Cristobal. We came within easy sight of San Salvador, where Columbus made his famous landing more than four hundred years ago. A magnificent monument of red and white granite has been erected there, presumably at the place of his landing.

We passed between Cuba and Haiti after 12 o'clock a. m., the 25th; the lighthouse on Cuba was visible at 11 o'clock p. m., the 24th. The course of the ship to this time was along 74 and 75 degrees W. longitude, which took us from 200 miles to 500 miles off our east coast. The sea has been described by the Commander, in his daily reports, as "rough," "boistrous" and "regular."

Down the east coast there was a brisk wind every day, mostly from the southeast, and thus far up the west coast there is a strong east wind.

A seven days' cruise without stop becomes monotonous, but the passengers who were well seemed happy. Every courtesy is extended to the ship's guests by officers and crew.

We arrived at Cristobal at 2 o'clock p. m. the 27th inst., and entered the canal at 9 o'clock a. m. the 28th, and were 9 hours going through. The locks require 15 minutes each in passing, and there are six, three near each end of the canal. Through Gatun lake the ship ran full speed, but Gaillard cut was traversed very cautiously, the ship moving not more than 2 miles per hour. The temperature in the canal zone is 60 to 100 degrees.

Christ Schenkel Dies Following Paralytic Stroke

Christian Schenkel, aged 71 years, an old-time resident of Mokena, died Friday morning, at the County Farm, following a stroke of paralysis, which he suffered several weeks ago. The stroke affected his right side. His speech was stricken, and his throat was affected so that he could hardly swallow. His right arm was also helpless.

Funeral services were held Sunday from a Joliet undertaking room, with burial in St. John cemetery, south of Mokena.

Mr. Schenkel was a kindly old man, and will be missed. He was a very familiar character about the village, and was always genial and faithful in his work. He lived alone for many years in a little cottage south of town. His parents had occupied this place, and since their death he has lived there alone.

He is survived by his brother Conrad of Mokena, two sisters, besides other relatives and friends.

Orland Milk Plant Destroyed In Big $10,000 Fire

The Dowd Milk Co. plant at Orland was destroyed by fire Friday night. The building, and a big tank motor truck used in hauling the milk to Chicago every day were destroyed by the flames, entailing a loss of $10,000, mostly covered by insurance.

The fire was discovered about 8:30 o'clock Friday evening, but the blaze had gained such rapid headway that the building was doomed. The truck driver had returned from the city about 7 o'clock and had placed the truck in its accustomed place, where it is said the fire first started. Just what caused the blaze has not been definitely learned.

The dairymen who have been hauling their milk to this plant every morning are now shipping their milk to Chicago via the Wabash railroad.

It is understood that the Dowd Milk Co. will rebuild their plant as soon as possible.

Celebrate Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fisher of Mokena celebrated their seventh wedding anniversary Sunday. A large company of relatives from Joliet and Chicago took part in

We arrive at Corinto, Nicaragua, tomorrow morning, and will have put in eleven days, including stops, and that will be one-half the trip from New York to Los Angeles. G. W. M.

Most Startling Photographs Of History

News-Bulletin readers are intensely interested in the unusual discoveries being made in Egypt by the opening of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the Pharaoh who reigned 3,500 years ago. They wish to see the interior of that tomb and of the things which it contained.

With its characteristic policy of being up to the minute in news interest, the News-Bulletin takes pleasure in showing pictures made from photographs taken inside the tomb. They show the ancient statues, vases, cabinets, couches, chariots, food and other objects that date back to a period before the time of David, second king of Israel.

Just think what it means to have your home paper print pictures made from actual photographs of objects that were in use 3,500 years ago; pictures that give an idea of how people of that age lived; of a civilization that passed away a thousand years before the birth of Christ.

The News-Bulletin will print these pictures each week until the series on hand is exhausted.

Frankfort Farm Once Bought For 75 Cents an Acre

Did you ever hear of the Indian Princess Man-I-To-Qua, who lived and roamed on the prairies of Illinois over a hundred years ago?

The young lady is reputed to have possessed land from Frankfort to Indianapolis. Recently when Albert Krusemark, well known Frankfort attorney, sought a name for his dairy farm, which is being run by Alvin Marti, east of Frankfort, he looked up the old records, and found reference made therein about Princess Man-I-To-Qua, who is said to have been presented with a vast tract of land reaching from Frankfort to Indianapolis by an Indian chief, following a big battle. Later, when the white people came, the land of the Krusemark farm was bought from the princess at 75 cents per acre. Years later the same land sold at $3.75 per acre, and when Attorney Krusemark purchased the farm, a few years ago, he paid $180 per acre. The price of this land advanced $178.25 per acre in a hundred years.

Attorney Krusemark and Mr. Marti, since learning of the Indian Princess, have decided to name the farm in her remembrance, so it is now known as the Man-I-To-Qua Dairy Farm.

Walter Fisher Gets Zahn Building

Walter Fisher, Mokena's energetic merchant has closed a deal with the Misses Viola and Pearl Zahn of Chicago for the Zahn building now occupied by the Mokena Hardware Company who are to locate in the building now occupied by Mr. Fisher. The latter has served notice on Krapp Bros., to vacate by April 1st so he can remodel the place. Mr. Fisher has operated a store for a year and he found Mokena such a good business town that he has decided to locate here permanently.

Classic Slang. Considerable so-called slang is classic. "Escape with the skin of my teeth" is from Job. "He is a brick" is from Plutarch. That historian tells of a king of Sparta who boasted that his army was the only wall of the city, "and every man is a brick." We call a fair and honest man "a square man," but the Greeks described the same person as Tetragonous—"a four-cornered man."

"Every dog has his day" is commonly attributed to Shakespeare, in Hamlet's speech, "The cat will mew and the dog will have his day." But 40 years before "Hamlet" Heyworth wrote, "But, as every man saith, a dog hath his day."

A man soon gets used to the distrust he has of himself.

MISS LULU BETT

By ZONA GALE

Copyright by D. Appleton & Company

VI—Continued.

"Oh, by the music houses. You go by the sales." For the first time it occurred to Cornish that this was ridiculous. "You know, I'm really studying law," he said, shyly and proudly. Law! How very interesting, from Ina. Oh, but won't he bring up some songs some evening, for them to try over? Her and Di? At this Di laughed and said that she was out of practice and lifted her glass of water. In the presence of adults Di made one weep, she was so slender, so young, so without defenses, so intolerably sensitive to every contact, so in agony lest she be found wanting. It was amazing how unlike was this Di to the Di who had ensnared Bobby Larkin. What was one to think?

Cornish paid very little attention to her. To Lulu he said kindly, "Don't you play, Miss—?" He had not caught her name—no stranger ever did catch it. But Dwight now supplied it: "Miss Lulu Bett," he explained, with loud emphasis, and Lulu burned her slow red. This question Lulu had usually answered by telling how a felon had interrupted her lessons and she had stopped "taking"—a participle sacred to music, in Warbleton. This vignette had been a kind of epitome of Lulu's biography. But now Lulu was heard to say, serenely:

"No, but I'm quite fond of it. I went to a lovely concert—two weeks ago."

They all listened. Strange, indeed, to think of Lulu as having had experiences of which they did not know.

"Yes," she said. "It was in Savannah, Georgia." She flushed, and lifted her eyes in a manner of faint defiance. "Of course," she said, "I don't know the names of all the different instruments they played, but there were a good many." She laughed pleasantly as a part of her sentence. "They had some lovely tunes," she said. She knew that the subject was not exhausted and she hurried on. "The hall was real large," she superadded, "and there were quite a good many people there. And it was too warm."

"I see," said Cornish, and said what he had been waiting to say: That he, too, had been in Savannah, Georgia.

Lulu lit with pleasure. "Well!" she said. And her mind worked and she caught at the moment before it had escaped. "Isn't it a pretty city?" she asked. And Cornish assented with the intense heartiness of the provincial. He, too, it seemed, had a conversational appearance to maintain by its own effort. He said that he had enjoyed being in that town and that he was there for two hours.

"I was there for a week," Lulu's superiority was really pretty.

"Have good weather?" Cornish selected next.

"Oh, yes. And they saw all the different buildings—but at her 'we' she flushed and was silenced. She was coloring and breathing quickly. This was the first bit of conversation of this sort in Lulu's life.

After supper Ina inevitably proposed croquet, Dwight pretended to try to escape and, with his irrepressible mien, talked about Ina, elaborate in his insistence on the third person—"She loves it, we have to humor her, you know how it is. Oh no! You don't know! But you will!"—and more of the same sort, everybody laughing heartily, save Lulu, who looked uncomfortable and wished that Dwight wouldn't, and Mrs. Bett, who paid no attention to anybody that night, not because she had not been introduced, an omission which she had not even noticed, but merely as another form of "tantrum"—a self-indulgence.

They emerged for croquet. And there on the porch sat Jenny Plow and Bobby, waiting for Di to keep an old engagement, which Di pretended to have forgotten, and to be frightfully annoyed to have to keep. She met the objections of her parents with all the batteries of her coquetry, set for both Bobby and Cornish and, bold in the presence of "company," at last went laughing away. And in the minute areas of her consciousness she said to herself that Bobby would be more in love with her than ever because she had risked all to go with him; and that Cornish ought to be distinctly attracted to her because she had not stayed. She was as primitive as pollen.

Ina was vexed. She said so, putting in a fashion which she should have outgrown with white muslin and blue ribbons, and she had outgrown none of these things.

"That just spoils croquet," she said. "I'm vexed. Now we can't have a real game."

From the side door, where she must have been lingering among the water-proofs, Lulu stepped forth.

"I'll play a game," she said.

When Cornish actually proposed to bring some music to the Deacons', Ina turned toward Dwight Herbert all the facets of her responsibility. And Ina's sense of responsibility toward Di was enormous, oppressive, primitive, amounting, in fact, toward this daughter of Dwight Herbert's late wife, to an ability to compress the offices of stepmotherhood into the functions of the lecture platform. Ina was a fountain of admonition. Her idea of a daughter, step or not, was that of a manufactured product, strictly, which you constantly pinched and molded. She thought that a moral preceptor had the right to secrete precepts. Di got them all. But of course the crest of Ina's responsibility was to marry Di. This verb should be transitive only when lovers are speaking of each other, or the minister or magistrate is speaking of lovers. It should never be transitive when predicated of parents or any other third party. But it is. Ina was quite agitated by its transitivity as she took to her husband her incredible responsibility.

"You know, Herbert," said Ina, "if this Mr. Cornish comes here very much, what we may expect."

"What may we expect?" demanded Dwight Herbert, crisply.

Ina always played his games, answered what he expected her to answer, pretended to be intuitive when she was not so, said "I know" when she didn't know at all. Dwight Herbert, on the other hand, did not even play her games when he knew perfectly what she meant, but pretended not to understand, made her repeat, made her explain. It was as if Ina had to please him for, say, a living; but as for that dentist, he had to please nobody. In the conversations of Dwight and Ina you saw the historical home forming in cloths in the fluid wash of the community.

"He'll fall in love with Di," said Ina.

"And what of that? Little daughter will have many a man fall in love with her, I should say."

"Yes, but, Dwight, what do you think of him?"

"What do I think of him? My dear Ina, I have other things to think of."

"But we don't know anything about him, Dwight—a stranger so."

"On the other hand," said Dwight with dignity, "I know a good deal about him."

With a great air of having done the fatherly and found out about this stranger before bringing him into the home, Dwight now related a number of stray circumstances dropped by Cornish in their chance talks.

"He has a little inheritance coming to him—shortly," Dwight wound up. "An inheritance—really? How much, Dwight?"

"Now isn't that like a woman, isn't it?"

"I thought he was from a good family," said Ina.

"My mercenary little pussy!"

"Well," she said with a sigh, "I shouldn't be surprised if Di did really

"Miss Lulu Bett, the Mocking Bird!" Dwight insisted.

accept him. A young girl is awfully flattered when a good-looking older man pays her attention. Haven't you noticed that?"

Dwight informed her, with an air of immense abstraction, that he left all such matters to her. Being married to Dwight was like a perpetual rehearsal, with Dwight's self-importance for audience.

A few evenings later, Cornish brought up the music. There was something overpowering in this brown-haired chap against the background of his negligible little shop, his whole capital in his few pianos. For he looked hopefully ahead, woke with plans, regarded the children in the street as if, conceivably, children might come within the confines of his life as he imagined it. A preposterous little man. And a preposterous store, empty, echoing, bare of wall, the three pianos near the front, the remainder of the floor stretching away like the corridors of the lost. He was going to get a dark curtain, he explained, and furnish the back part of the store as his own room. What dignity in phrasing, but how mean that little room would look—cot bed, washbowl and pitcher, and little mirror—almost certainly a mirror with a wavy surface, almost certainly that.

"And then, you know," he always added, "I'm reading law."

The Plows had been asked in that evening. Bobby was there. They were, Dwight Herbert said, going to have a sing.

Di was to play. And Di was now embarked on the most difficult feat of her emotional life, the feat of remaining to Bobby Larkin the lure, the beloved lure, the while to Cornish she instinctively played the role of womanly little girl.

"Up by the festive lamp, everybody!" Dwight Herbert cried.

As they gathered about the upright piano, that startled, Dwightish instrument, standing in its attitude of unrest, Lulu came in with another lamp. "Do you need this?" she asked.

They did not need it, there was, in fact, no place to set it, and this Lulu must have known. But Dwight found a place. He swept Ninian's photograph from the marble shelf of the mirror, and when Lulu had placed the lamp there, Dwight thrust the photograph into her hands.

"You take care of that," he said, with a droop of lid discernible only to those who—presumably—loved him. His old attitude toward Lulu had shown a terrible sharpening in these ten days since her return.

She stood uncertainly, in the thin black and white gown which Ninian had bought for her, and held Ninian's photograph and looked helplessly about. She was moving toward the door when Cornish called:

"See here! Aren't you going to sing?"

"What?" Dwight used the falsetto. "Lulu sing? Lulu?"

She stood awkwardly. She had a piteous recrudescence of her old agony at being spoken to in the presence of others. But Di had opened the "Album of Old Favorites," which Cornish had elected to bring, and now she struck the opening chords of "Bonny Eloise." Lulu stood still, looking rather piteously at Cornish. Dwight offered his arm, absurdly crooked. The Plows and Ina and Di began to sing. Lulu moved forward, and stood a little away from them, and sang, too. She was still holding Ninian's picture. Dwight did not sing. He lifted his shoulders and his eyebrows and watched Lulu.

When they had finished, "Lulu the mocking bird!" Dwight cried. He said "ba-ird."

"Fine!" cried Cornish. "Why, Miss Lulu, you have a good voice!"

"Miss Lulu Bett, the mocking bird!" Dwight insisted.

Lulu was excited, and in some accession of faint power. She turned to him now, quietly, and with a look of appraisal.

"Lulu the dove," she then surprisingly said, "to put up with you."

It was her first bit of conscious repartee to her brother-in-law.

Cornish was bending over Di.

"What next do you say?" he asked.

She lifted her eyes, met his own, held them. "There's such a lovely, lovely sacred song here," she suggested, and looked down.

"You like sacred music?"

She turned to him her pure profile, her eyelids fluttering up, and said: "I love it."

"That's it. So do I. Nothing like a nice sacred piece," Cornish declared.

Bobby Larkin, at the end of the piano, looked directly into Di's face.

"Give me ragtime," he said now, with the effect of bursting out of somewhere. "Don't you like ragtime?" he put it to her directly.

Di's eyes danced into his, they sparkled for him, her smile was a smile for him alone, all their store of common memories was in their look.

"Let's try 'My Rock, My Refuge,'" Cornish suggested. "That's got up real attractive."

Di's profile again, and her pleased voice saying that this was the very one she had been hoping to hear him sing.

They gathered for "My Rock, My Refuge."

"Oh," cried Ina, at the conclusion of this number, "I'm having such a perfectly beautiful time. Isn't everybody?" everybody's hostess put it.

"Lulu is," said Dwight, and added softly to Lulu: "She don't have to hear herself sing."

It was incredible. He was like a bad boy with a frog. About that photograph of Ninian he found a dozen ways to torture her, called attention to it, showed it to Cornish, set it on the piano facing them all. Everybody must have understood—excepting the Plows. These two gentle souls sang placidly through the Album of Old Favorites, and at the melodies smiled happily upon each other with an air from another world. Always it was as if the Plows walked some fair, inter-penetrating plane, from which they looked out as do other things not quite of earth, say, flowers and fire and music.

Strolling home that night, the Plows were overtaken by some one who ran badly, and as if she were unaccustomed to running.

"Mis' Plow, Mis' Plow!" this one called, and Lulu stood beside them.

"Say!" she said. "Do you know of any job that I could get me? I mean that I'd know how to do? A job for money. . . . I mean a job. . . ."

She burst into passionate crying. They drew her home with them.

Lying awake sometime after midnight, Lulu heard the telephone ring. She heard Dwight's concerned "Is that so?" And his cheerful "Be right there."

Grandma Gates was sick, she heard him tell Ina. In a few moments he ran down the stairs. Next day they told how Dwight had sat for hours that night, holding Grandma Gates so that her back would rest easily and she could fight for her faint breath. The kind fellow had only about two hours of sleep the whole night long.

Vegetable Glow Worms.

A scientist named Ehrman speaks in enthusiastic terms of "vegetable glow-worms," as he calls them, which he observed gleaming on the walls and in the crevices of Swedish mines. In Bohemia, the caves are not uncommonly illuminated by this interesting cryptogam; and, according to Pilpison, sufficient light has been emitted in English coal mines from this source to enable miners to read ordinary print.

WALLACE ACTS IN PACKER DEAL

Takes Steps to Prevent Merger of the Big Chicago Interests.

SECRETARY FILES COMPLAINT

Alleges Proposed Purchase Violates Law and Tends to Lessen Competition—Test Case Says Head of Armour Company.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace took steps to prevent the merger of the big packing interests of Armour & Co. and Morris & Co. Acting under the packer control law, the secretary served a formal complaint against the two packing interests, alleging that the combination would be in violation of this law.

Information received by the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Wallace said, is that a tentative agreement for the merger had already been reached. The two packing companies will have an opportunity to present their case before the Secretary of Agriculture on April 2. If upon the basis of evidence then submitted the secretary is of the opinion that the combination is in violation of the packer control law an order "to cease and desist" from its consummation will be entered.

From this decision the packers may appeal to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago and then the case may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. Expedition of the legal proceedings is provided for by the law and heavy penalties for violation of the "cease and desist" order may be imposed by the court.

The main basis of Secretary Wallace's complaint against the proposed combine is that it would lessen competition, particularly in the buying of live stock, and this would injure the American farmer, whose rights the control law protects.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—F. Edson White, president of Armour & Co., issued a statement saying that the government's complaint against Armour & Co., and Morris & Co. to prevent the proposed merger of the two firms was filed merely to allow the courts to pass on the legality of the proposed merger, to which the administration seems to see no objection.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 27.—Wyllie Morgan, the prisoner held in connection with the kidnapping of six-year-old Lillian Gilmore and her five-year-old sister, Dorothy, confessed and led the detectives to a spot on the Heshaminy creek, near Croydon, Pa., where the body of Lillian was found in a tree stump hole on the bank of the stream. Croydon is twenty miles north of this city.

The condition of Dorothy, who, after having been put out of the motor car in an isolated section, made her way home and identified Morgan as the man who had carried her and her sister off, was reported as improved.

Britain's Arable Area Reduced.

The arable area of Great Britain since 1918 has been continuously reduced. Land now under the plow is not much greater in extent than immediately before the war, according to a report from the board of agriculture. The total area under crops and grass showed less change in 1922 than for several years past, the figures being 26,025,000 acres in 1922, against 26,140,000 in 1921. The arable area, however, was reduced by 308,000 acres, while the permanent grass area was increased by 189,000 acres.

Wolves Revered by Indians.

Wolves, up to recent times, were never killed by Indians, as, according to their belief, the spirits of the departed inhabited the bodies of the wolves. When they came too close to the camp the Indians would throw a firebrand or rock at them, and would use a rifle only if the dogs were attacked or a child was in danger. If the wolf was killed, the rifle was considered useless afterward and thrown away.

Senate Approves More U. S. Farm Loans

WASHINGTON.—Enactment into law of the Lenroot rural credits bill, as passed by the senate, will mean an expansion of the activities of the present farm loan system into a new field.

The bill does not interfere in any way with the farm mortgage business of the present 12 federal land banks or the 67 joint stock land banks, but will establish as an adjunct to the 12 federal land banks new farm credit agencies dealing in so-called personal credits. Loans, discounts and debentures of the new agencies, which are designated as farm credits departments of the land banks, will be based on warehouse receipts, live stock, or agricultural security other than farm land.

The loans of the present land banks and the joint stock land banks are based on land mortgages and are designed to help tenant farmers purchase their farms. The new agencies are intended to aid in financing the production and marketing of crops and the fattening and marketing of live stock.

The federal farm loan board, which will have supervision of the entire system, will become an even more important factor in the financial affairs of the country.

The present 12 federal land banks are co-operative institutions, the borrowers having gradually acquired stock originally subscribed by the government. The original stock of each bank was $750,000. The present capitalization of the 12 banks is $36,997,950, of which only about $3,000,000 is still held by the government. Under the Lenroot bill the government will subscribe an initial capital of $5,000,000 for a new farm credits department in each of the 12 banks. The total government capital for the 12 may run to $120,000,000.

The joint stock land banks are privately financed and managed, but with the same tax exemption privileges for their bonds enjoyed by the federal land banks. The 67 joint stock land banks are scattered among 33 states.

Hoover Would Survey Rubber Supply

PROPOSAL that the American government investigate the rubber production possibilities of the Philippines and South America was endorsed publicly by Secretary Hoover after he had conferred with representatives of British rubber-producing interests and American consumers.

Secretary Hoover endorsed the proposal in a letter to Senator McCormick (Rep., Ill.) in spite of assurances from the British representatives that the only object of recent British legislation restricting rubber production in the colonies was to establish a price to insure reasonable returns and expansion of rubber plantations.

Representatives of the American consumers of crude rubber said they were desirous of obtaining an adequate return to the producing industry, but feared that the restriction plan would stimulate speculation and runaway prices, which would be disastrous to British producers by again stimulating overproduction with ultimate collapse in prices. This, they said, would in turn injure American consumers through speculation and losses.

The British representatives replied that the restrictive legislation had been necessitated by the virtual collapse of the industry, owing to prices below cost of production. They said their association would do all in its power to prevent runaway prices.

After pointing out in his letter that the United States consumes 75 per cent of the crude rubber produced in the world, while most of the rubber-producing properties are controlled by the British, Secretary Hoover said:

"It is highly desirable that this department (the Department of Commerce) should be placed in position where we can make an exhaustive investigation covering a wide variety of subjects, such as areas of possible production, land and labor laws, labor supply, transportation, taxation, production costs, profits, security of investment, etc."

Forest Service Wants Alaska a State

STATEHOOD for that part of Alaska lying south of the arctic circle and east of the 152d meridian of longitude is advocated by Col. William B. Greeley, chief forester of the United States, in a report to the secretary of agriculture in which he says that from the standpoint of the national forest administration and development, no happier step could be taken than admittance of that part of the territory to the full rights of an American commonwealth.

"It seems to be generally accepted that the territory as a whole is not ready for statehood," says Colonel Greeley, "but unquestionably that part lying east of the 152d meridian and south of the arctic circle has the economic wealth and the stable, law-abiding population which, according to our historic policies and precedents, have always been recognized by congress as entitling continental territory and people to self-government in the Union.

"It is becoming evident the solution of the Alaska problem is local self-government. Apparently, what the people of Alaska want is not the power to run the government's business or property in Alaska, but power to run their own business. They want to make their own laws, levy their own taxes and spend their own public money, just as do the people in the states.

"In short, what Alaska wants is not that the Union should be ousted from the territory, but that Alaska should be admitted to the Union."

The encouragement and assistance given by the Department of Agriculture, through the forest service and bureau of public roads, in building up an export lumber trade, the basic work going forward to the establishment of the pulp and paper industry, and the large expenditures which are being made on forest roads, together with a decentralized local administration, Colonel Greeley says, are contributing largely to the growth and prosperity of the territory.

Panama Wants New Deal With America

THE State department has been informed by the Panaman government that in forthcoming negotiations for a new treaty to supplant the Taft agreement covering Canal Zone relationships, the right of the Panaman government under the original treaty over foreign commerce in the Canal Zone will be asserted.

The point has been made by the Panaman authorities that assurances were given by President Roosevelt that the United States had no intention of making the zone an independent colony in the middle of the republic of Panama. The representations to the State department are understood to declare plainly that the government of Panama would be unable to accept any new agreement which might bring about such a result.

So far as known the terms of the draft treaty prepared in recent conferences between State and War department officials, including Governor Morrow of the Canal Zone, has not yet been communicated to the Panaman authorities.

Nor will officials here discuss what notice will be taken in these negotiations of various matters in which the people of Panama are held by their government to have been adversely afected through American activities in the zone.

Among these points is the question of acquisition of further lands for the canal or its fortifications. The Panaman authorities have put forth the view that the canal should be pronounced by treaty a completed project, and the existing authority for taking over additional lands should be nullified.

The Panaman government desires also to establish its own customs service at canal terminals to deal with passengers or commodities bound for the adjacent cities of Panama and Colon.

A variety of other questions has been raised by Panama for settlement in the treaty negotiations.

SINGS WITH JOY WHILE AT WORK

Mrs. Banes Says Tanlac Ended Indigestion, Sourness and Palpitations and Made Labors Light.

"Tanlac has helped me so much I wish everyone suffering like I did would follow my suggestion to use it," said Mrs. Sadie Banes, 2037 Washington St., Kansas City, Mo., the other day. "Before I took Tanlac my appetite was so poor it seemed beyond cultivation, and the little I managed to eat gave me indigestion and caused awful sourness and palpitation. I was simply miserable from nervous headaches, dizziness and knife-like pains in my back, always slept poorly, and felt so bad that at times I just had to quit my housework and lie down."

"Tanlac was so well suited to my case that it has only taken three bottles, half of the full treatment, to restore me to perfect health. It makes me so happy to be without an ache, pain or trouble of any kind that I go about my work humming and singing. I just can't help rejoicing over what Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Where "Flapper" Idea Came From.

It is said that the original flapper was the Haytian girl who adopted short skirts decades ago and who used to "roll her own" as far back as 1915. The girls of that island make regular trips to market and it is their custom to ride on the back of burros. They carry their stockings and slippers under their arms until they reach the outskirts of the city and then as they ride along they don their footwear, the stockings being held in place by a deft twist about the tops just as our girls have been doing lately. As they return home the footwear is removed and laid away.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

CHILDLESS HOMES

MADE HAPPY

Presence of Little Ones a Great Blessing

Four Interesting Letters

Cortland, N. Y.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was weak and wanted to become strong and have a child. My husband read about it in the 'Cortland Standard' and thought it might help me. It certainly did for I now have a lovely boy fifteen months old who weighs forty pounds. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends and you can certainly use my testimonial in your little books and in the newspapers, as it might help to make some other childless home happy by the presence of little ones as it has done mine."—Mrs. CLAUDE P. CANFIELD, 10 Salisbury St., Cortland, N. Y.

A Message to Mothers

Hamilton, Ohio.—"I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound since girlhood, having taken it when I was younger and suffering from a weakness and backache. Later I have taken it again to strengthen me before the birth of my child, as I was troubled with pains in my back and a lifeless, weak feeling. I think if mothers would only take your wonderful medicine they would not dread childbirth as they do. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every woman."—Mrs. JOS. FALCOW, JR., 562 S. 11th Street, Hamilton, Ohio.

The Tinley Park local of the Milk Producers' Association held a meeting at Saenger hall Monday afternoon to elect a delegate to the Chicago meetings of the association. August Willie was chosen. The local voted against the proposition of the association paying its members the losses sustained by dealers going broke and owing association members. It was thought the assessments would be too heavy.

Four Reasons Why You Should Buy Your Ford Car This Month

I

The unprecedented demand for Ford Cars throughout the winter months has taken the entire output of the Ford plants working at capacity, indicating that the demand this Spring will be far in excess of the number of Ford Cars that can possibly be built.

II

January was the tenth consecutive month in which retail deliveries exceeded 100,000 Ford Cars and Trucks. Requirements for February, the month when preparations are already under way for Spring business called for 148,407 Cars and Trucks--more than 24,000 in excess of the number we can possibly produce.

III

Ford dealers in many parts of the country are already finding it necessary to specify future delivery dates on Ford Products, because there are no reserve stocks to draw from.

IV

Your order placed now will protect you against delay or disappointment later on. It is the only way you can be assured of reasonably prompt delivery.

We consider it important to give you these facts, so that if you are planning to purchase a Ford Car, Truck or Fordson Tractor this Spring or Summer you can list your order at once and take advantage our dealer's first opportunity to make delivery.

Dolan can throw a rope as good as any buckaroo that ever rode the range and his horse is as well trained as a cowpony. When swimmers are caught in the undertow or rough water, Dolan rides right out into the ocean, his horse being a strong swimmer, until he is close enough to throw his rope. In this way he has rescued many persons from accidental drowning or suicide.

BURLEY TOBACCO HEAD

J. C. Stone, president of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative association, is the actual head of an organization of more than 78,000 farmers in the states of Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Tennessee and Missouri. Under his direction growers sold during the past year 120,000,000 pounds of tobacco. Mr. Stone was born at Richmond, Ky., in 1878, was educated at Central university, and entered the tobacco business in 1897.

Grave Opened, Jewels Not There

With representatives of all the government departments concerned taking an active part, with armed guards patrolling the cemetery, with field and line officers present and with a morbidly curious crowd gathered in the adjoining streets, the opening of the coffin containing the remains of James Jones, a sailor who had died in Siberia and was buried in a Brooklyn cemetery, was opened in search for a reported bag containing many of the jewels belonging to the late czar of all the Russias. And there were no jewels there.

EFFIGY OF KING TUT

This is one of the life-size statues of King Tut-Ankh-Amen that guarded the sealed doorway of his sepulcher at Luxor, Egypt. It is of carved wood covered with a black pitch-like material. The headdress, collarette, armlets, wristbands, dress, mace and staff are heavily gilt and the sandals of gold. On the forehead of the king the royal uraeus or cobra is of inlaid bronze and gold, and pupils of obsidian. Note the calm expression upon the king's face.

Suppressing a Squeak.

Recently it has been discovered at Macclesfield, in England, that a brake-block on a cart must not by virtue of an old law be allowed to squeak. A quarry owner was summoned for allowing a cart to be driven without an appliance for lessening the noise caused by the brakes, and though he pleaded that the cart did not make as much noise as many motorcars, he had to pay the costs of the prosecution. Macclesfield is a town where they make silk. Will they some day discover that there is an ancient law forbidding silk to rustle?

HERE'S A PERILOUS JOB

Members of the crew of a lighthouse tender are shown chopping ice from one of the buoys in New York harbor. After a severe stretch of cold weather ice covers these buoys and if not cleaned off adds so much extra weight that the buoys sink so low in the water that ship captains have difficulty in picking them up. Clearing the ice away is a dangerous job.

Close Death.

Buried alive for five hours in a mine at Blaengar, Glamorganshire, Wales, a collier was saved after a gallant fight by the rescue party. The victim was travelling along a mine roadway with his horse and tram when an immense fall of rock occurred, slabs of 20 to 30 tons encircling him. The horse was killed and the tram splintered, but the man, although felled to the ground, was protected by the shelving of the slabs of rocks and rods of iron from the shattered tram. Rescue efforts were started at once, and the men's skill in timbering was shown to such purpose that some of them crawled between the rock spaces and made their comrade's position less painful, pending his removal. He was brought out, not seriously injured, but suffering from shock.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

FORMING HABITS

IN A broad sense, habit may be termed the element of conscious or unconscious persistence.

Some habits are opposed to noble growth, such as indolence, indifference to lofty impressions, forgetfulness, the acquirement of ragged tempers, vulgar speech, failure to adapt one's self to new circumstances, fault-finding and the common habit of thinking evil of one's friends and neighbors.

There are hundreds of such habits which are opposed to the development of the best there is in us, ruinous alike to our future careers and contentment.

By following a train of wrong ideas again and again, we gradually lose our ability to distinguish evil from good.

We become skeptical, cynical, narrow, and unless by some fortunate discovery we see the falsity of our position before it is too late to mend, we find ourselves in company with the grouches, sour-faced and fault-finders.

No man or woman who would win success and the good opinion of his or her friends, can hope to do so without first overcoming his or her degrading habits.

To do this there must be formed the practice of mental watchfulness with a will power behind it capable of moving always in the right direction.

The fixed disposition to do a thing comes from numerous repetitions. It is by such a process that good or bad customs are formed, which ultimately take to the bright hilltops or down the dark valley of failure and discouragement.

One of the good habits to form in youth is that of attention, especially in regard to advice from parents, who know from experience what is needed for the stimulation of growing minds.

This applies with like force to everybody in all stations of life, and especially to those who are dependent on others.

The habit of giving intense attention to orders, however trivial, and remembering them when the time arrives for their execution, marks the difference between the competent and the incompetent, the foolish, and the wise, those who are destined for life servitude and those who are destined to lead.

Every good habit is laudable, every bad habit reprehensible.

The Ordinary Things

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I VE had some rather pleasant times While living day by day That echo like remembered chimes Along life's weary way, That make my heart again a boy's And give my spirit wings— They were the ordinary joys And ordinary things.

Strange, but the triumphs of an hour, The victories elate, Have lost their old, accustomed power And seem no longer great. They were but tinsel, were but toys— The quiet moment brings A thought of ordinary joys And ordinary things.

Life's battle is so hard and fierce, Such passions sweep the soul As through the foe's line we pierce— A passage to the goal. The very triumph often cloys And, on the throne of kings, Men long for ordinary joys And ordinary things.

Whatever else, make sure of these As through the world you go; For, after all the victories, Your heart will want, I know, Some memory no time destroys, Some quiet hour that brings The peace of ordinary joys And ordinary things.

SCHOOL DAYS

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because —

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You Are Over-Ambitious? "You work too hard," "you play too little," "you aren't interested in anything but your work," "we miss you at our house," "you never show up any more"—all and more of these things are said to you? Aren't they? Well, maybe you are getting a bit lopsided. This, of course, you have to decide for yourself. Being ambitious never hurt anyone. You can't arrive on any other train, and it isn't a parlor-car train, either; it is the long workman's train and it takes the sacrifice of the things to which your friends say you never appear. When you have a goal you are happiest when you are on "the way"—parties look small and everything else looks insignificant. All well and good. Nothing is so marvelous as the path of the ambitious to the ambitious, but you must never forget that to be too one-sided may block and turn over your car. Getting there is your business and laughter never hurt the really sincere.

Your Get-away here is: To get the best out of your life, you have the right to choose the right things to leave out. It is entirely up to you and no one's affair but yours.

Uncommon Sense . . .

By JOHN BLAKE

USE YOUR MIND

YOU never know what your mind can do till you use it. The man who saves his money until he can buy an automobile finds out right away what that automobile can do.

He takes it out on the road, and runs it. He reads about the speed and endurance and gasoline consumption of other cars. And he experiments with his own to find out how it compares with them.

Yet the same man who has a mind that may be of more value than a million cars will, in nine cases out of ten, go through life without ever knowing what that mind can do.

Few of us ever develop more than a quarter of our ability. Few of us discover more than half of the powers that lie in our mind.

The reason for this is chiefly laziness. It is so much easier to work just hard enough to make a living than it is to work hard enough to amount to something big, that we take the former course.

And our minds, lacking exercise, never are made to produce the results that they could produce.

Unfortunately the realization of this comes usually too late. At forty we see other men, who in youth had no better mental equipment than we had, surpassing us.

We see that if we had been as thoughtful and as industrious as they, and had developed our latent powers, we might have done as well.

But mind building is long and hard work. And the time that it can be done is in youth.

Get all out of your mind that is in it. You may not be gifted with genius or even talent. But you will never find that out till you bring out every unit of power that is in your brain.

And the only way to do that is to use it constantly and intelligently.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"GYPSY"

JUST as America was named for an explorer who had no right to the honor, and the "turkey" (French dinde or poulet d'Inde, Indian chicken) hails from the Western hemisphere instead of the eastern, the name "gypsy" is applied on account of the early belief that these wandering tribes had their origin in Egypt instead of from a more distant land. When these migratory people made their appearance in England at the beginning of the Fifteenth century, their dark complexions and foreign speech, coupled with their admitted knowledge of "black arts" supposed to be indigenous to Egypt, led to their designation as "Gyptians," and it was only natural that, in time, this should be shortened into the slightly more euphonious "gypsy"—the name by which they have been known ever since.

"Bohemians," the French appellation for gypsies, involves an error similar to the English—these tribes being taken by the common people of France to be the expelled Hussites of Bohemia. In the German "Zigeuner" there is no indication of the land from which they were presumed to have come, but, instead, a typically Teutonic bit of bluntness—for "Zigeuner" is a slight contraction of "Zieh-Gauner" or "roaming thieves." LESSON FOR MARCH 4

JESUS TEACHING IN THE TEMPLE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 20:1-6; 21:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's and unto God the things which be God's.—Luke 20:25.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matt. 7:28-29; Isa. 23:14-29; Acts 4:7-22; Rom. 13:1-7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Gift That Pleased Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Widow and Her Two Mites.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Fearless Teacher.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Answering His Opponents.

The popularity of Jesus after the triumphal entry greatly troubled the rulers of Israel. He met their wicked challenge as to his authority in such a skillful way as to place them under condemnation for their unbelief. This condition was accentuated by the parable of the householder.

1. The Question of Paying Tribute (20:1-26).

1. Spies Sent to Entrap Jesus (v. 20). The rulers were too cowardly to do this themselves, so they employed underlings to do their mean work while they hid away. This diabolical method is employed today in political and religious life. Many times questions are raised under the guise of sincerity, when the real purpose is to do mischief.

2. Wicked Flattery (v. 21). They complimented His truthful teaching, His impartiality and courage. They certified to His faithfulness even to that extent that He would face Caesar himself. This compliment was true, though insincerely given. Back of this flattery was the base purpose to destroy Jesus. Many today praise to the face in order to stab in the back.

3. The Cunning Question (vv. 22-26). "Is it lawful for us to give tribute to Caesar or not?" At this time the Jews were galling under the yoke of the Roman government. To have answered this question either by "yes" or "no" would have involved difficulties. To have answered "yes" would have conveyed the impression of endorsing all that the Roman government did. To have answered "no," would have at once brought him into conflict with the government. It is not always an easy matter for a Christian to determine his right relation to civil government.

Christ's reply to this question properly understood and applied is the final word on the subject. Until the civil authorities demand that which is a violation of God's law we are bound to render unto them obedience. Render unto Caesar the things due within the realm of the rights of government.

But while Christ's answer sets forth their duties to civil authorities, He used the occasion to impress upon them the duties due to God. Render unto God the things that are God's. Man bears the image of God. Therefore he should honor and serve Him. Since he enjoys God's protection and care, it is his duty to own allegiance to Him, yield his life to Him in service, worship and praise. Everyone who enjoys the benefits of civil government is obliged to pay the taxes which are necessary for the support of that government, and everyone who receives God's favor is placed under a like obligation unto Him.

1. Jesus' Estimate of Gifts (21:1-4).

1. Jesus Watching the People Giving (v. 1). He was greatly interested in observing the way the people cast their gifts into the treasury. Perhaps there is more vital index to one's character than the way he behaves before the Lord's treasury. Jesus sits over against every treasury and knows every dollar cast into it. He knows how the dollars come and how they go. No trickery can deceive Him. He not only knows this in the church, but He knows it in the business world.

2. The Rich Gave of Their Abundance (vv. 1-4). They, no doubt, gave much, but in proportion to what they had left their gifts were small. The size of the gift is not primarily to be measured by how much it is, but how much has the giver left.

3. A Widow Gave Two Mites (vv. 2-4). In value a mite was less than a cent. Though the two coins were of small value themselves, they represented her all—not merely her surplus, but her living. Let no one deceive himself by pretending to give the widow's mite, for to give the widow's mite means to give everything.

4. Jesus' Verdict (vv. 3-4). He declared that she had given more than they all. Jesus looks into the heart and estimates our gifts not by their size but by the motives prompting them.

An Honest Man.

I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue enough to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles, the character of an "honest man."—George Washington.

Happiness.

Oh, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes!—Shakespeare.

Must Make the Pot Boil.

Fortune may find a pot, but you own industry must make it boil.

Prayer Paramount

By REV. JOHN C. PAGE

Teacher of Bible Doctrine, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Pray without ceasing.—I Thes. 5:17.

The chief desire of a Christian should be to become a man or a woman of prayer. There is no way by which we can more directly advance the cause of Christ and promote spiritual life and power than by much prayer. The measure of usefulness in any Christian life is determined by the measure of spiritual power possessed and exercised for others' good. One's walk through the world, their work for the world and their warfare against the powers of darkness that overshadow the world, are altogether dependent upon prayer.

The Bible basis of prayer is found in the relationship that exists between God and His believing people. The sons of men become the sons of God through faith in Jesus Christ. Then, because they are sons, God sends forth the Spirit of His Son into their hearts, crying "Abba Father." "The Spirit Himself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." This relationship is entered into by faith and is made real in experience by the indwelling Holy Spirit. From this prayer issues as naturally as water from a spring. The prayer of communion is the necessary outcome of the relationship between Father and child.

There is another relationship into which Christians enter, as clearly seen in Rev. 1:5-6, where we read that Christ loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood and made us to be kings and priests unto God. Comparatively speaking, only a few of God's people possess their possessions in this sphere, hence the limited number of real intercessors—those who pray for others. The priest is one who represents man to God, one who responds to the apostolic appeal found in I Tim. 2, "I exhort therefore, that first of all supplications, prayers, intercession and giving of thanks be made for all men, for kings and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceful life in all godliness and honesty, for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God, our Saviour, who would have all men to be saved and to come into a knowledge of the truth." From the vantage ground of this two-fold relationship, namely, sons of God and priests unto God, prayer is seen to be an absolute necessity, an infinite privilege, and a solemn responsibility.

1. Prayer is an absolute necessity. Fitness for fruitful service is an outgrowth of prayer. "The achievements of a soldier on the battle field," said General Nogi, hero of Port Arthur, "are nothing but the flowering and fruition of the work and training of his daily life in the time of peace." Taking time to pray and meditate upon the Scripture is an absolute necessity as a constant preparation for fighting the fight of faith victoriously and meeting the crises of life successfully. If prayer is anything it is everything. A world-renowned scientist recently declared that prayer is the mightiest force in the universe and that the Christian church is blind to this fact.

2. Prayer is an infinite privilege. "Prayer changes things." Notwithstanding all that is said by so-called learned men concerning the universe and the reign of law, God is more than creator of the universe; He is the Father of the great family, for whose sake, and in answer to whose requests, He works in a supernatural way, a way unknown to any but the regenerated. A way hidden from the worldly wise but revealed unto the babes, the born ones. Prayer does change things; be lieve it, act on it and you will become convinced of its power.

3. Prayer is a solemn responsibility. Relationship always involves responsibility. This cannot be avoided if you are a child of God. The responsibility is as extensive as the relationship. Prayer is not an obligation for a privileged few, but for all of the children of God. All His children have the ability to pray by virtue of the relationship into which they have been brought by grace through faith. There must be a response commensurate with this ability, for only in this way can we meet our responsibility. Too much emphasis cannot be given to this matter. There is at this juncture in human affairs a responsibility for Christians to pray for a revival throughout the whole church of God. Certain blind leaders have in recent years made the fatal mistake of substituting an educational program in the church for the regenerative work of the Holy Spirit. The result has been disastrous. Every realm of human thought and life has felt the blight and hurt of this great mistake. It is incumbent upon Christians to pray intelligently, plainly, persistently that the true work of God in the church may be speedily revived.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SAUCY SYNURA

"I am going to tell you a story this evening," said Daddy, "about the Saucy Synura colony."

"Oh, Daddy!" exclaimed Nancy. "Now, really! Why, I haven't the slightest idea what you are talking about. I won't understand the story at all."

"I know what saucy means," said Nick, "and a colony is a kind of group."

"Well, knowing two out of three words is a fairly good percentage," said Daddy.

"But, of course, I will explain to you what Synura means. For I didn't know myself until only recently when I heard about them and their city visit."

"So they're city people, are they?" asked Nancy.

"Well, I'd hardly call them city people," said Daddy. "But we'll hear what they are right away."

"Synura are little creatures halfway between animals and plants. They are spindle-shaped and attach themselves in a colony, for they always live in numbers. They are light green in color."

"They give off a kind of an oil in the springtime, which makes the water taste fishy; but they do not make it unhealthful—only not very pleasant!"

"Scientists, or men who understand science, say they have been on the earth for thousands and thousands of years, so it must be said for them that they belong to an old family."

"When a colony has reached the number of forty or fifty individuals it splits up and forms other colonies."

"It takes a thousand colonies to make any fishy oil taste."

"Now, usually every spring, as I've said, the Synura become active and do a little sporting about—so that the fishy taste has been noticed before."

"Whether the Synura are active in other places I've not found out, but in this particular city I have in mind the Synura become busy every springtime."

"Yet the water is perfectly pure and fresh and good."

"Well, this year, what do you suppose the Synura did?"

"I'm sure one could never guess what a Synura or a lot of them might do!"

"They decided they'd be fashionable and that they needed a change," so they began to be active right in the middle of the winter, and the city water began then to taste fishy."

"People would boil the water so it would taste better, and I heard of a family of goldfish whose mistress boiled their water, too, for they didn't like the fishy taste, even though they were fish themselves."

"Oh, yes, when the fishy taste was so noticeable at first these goldfish lost all their energy and interest in life, and when their water was boiled for them they began to enjoy themselves once more."

"But the Synura were very bothersome. People would say to each other: 'How is the water today; very bad, or a little better?'"

"And here were the Synura having such a good time in their saucy synura style and saying, as they stretched themselves about: 'We needed a change earlier this year.'"

"And after I had heard about the Synura I made up a few verses about them for you children."

"Here are the verses: The Synura is very gay, The Synura is out to play, What cares the Synura if it tastes fishy? What cares the Synura, I say?"

The Synura came ahead of time, The Synura tho't it was sublime To tease the city people so, That's truth, as well as rhyme!

The Synura wanted to get acquainted, Even if the water they tainted, Though that's a slight exaggeration— They're not as bad as they're painted!

They're really harmless; that is why The little Synura did sigh, 'We'll have to give the people a surprise.' And they did!

Two New Lenox Settlers Die

Mrs. Charles Cooper, who has been a resident of New Lenox township since 1898, died at her home in New Lenox Monday, aged 58 years. Pneumonia was the cause of death.

Mrs. Cooper, nee Dorothy Bribane, was born in Bloom, Ill., in 1870. In 1890 she was united in marriage with Chas. T. Cooper, and three years later they located on a farm north of New Lenox.
Ten years ago they left the farm and came to New Lenox to make their home with the deceased's sister, Miss Mae Brisbane.

The deceased is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Hazel
Stephen of Joliet; one brother,
Joseph C. Brisbane of New Lenox, and two sisters, Miss Mae Bribane of New Lenox and Mrs.
Martha Patrick of Kansas City.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 2 p. m. at the late home, Rev. A. F. Clark of the Oak Park church, and one time pastor of the New Lenox
M. E. church, officiating. Burial in Maplewood cemetery, New Lenox.

Death claimed another former
New Lenox township resident when Mrs. Elizabeth Love, aged 86 years, died Tuesday morning in Joliet. She was born in New Lenox township, on March 10th, 1887. She was the daughter of John and Lydia Perry Cooper.
On April 21, 1864, she was united in marriage with Samuel Love, who died February 26, 1896. Five children were born of this union.
Two sons, John W. C. and Samuel E., are dead. Three daughters surviving are: Mrs. Arthur Watson of Des Moines, Iowa, Mrs.
George J. Cowing and Miss Anna
M. Love of Joliet.

The deceased was an aunt of
Chas. T. Cooper and Mrs. Jeff
Doig of New Lenox.

Funeral services will be held at
Joliet from the Richard street
M. E. church Friday at 2:30 p. m.
Burial in Oakwood cemetery.

The Ladies' Guild of the Grace
Episcopal church met with Mrs.
J. C. Urch. A comforter was tied.

Miss Jackson, teacher in the primary room of the New Lenox school, was called to DeKalb the past week by the death of her mother.

Thru error it was stated in this column last week that the birthday of Mrs. Millis Kuickerbocker was celebrated at the J. C. Urch home. It was the birthday of Miss Rilla Fellows instead.

Louis Pelkey, who has been ill with grip, is getting better.

Preparations are being made to start work on concretizing the Lincoln highway thru here soon as the weather gets warm. At present a big shed is being built east of the village along the Wabash road for the storage of cement.
Three carloads of cement have already been shipped in on the Rock Island.

Elmer Keuch Quits Tinley Market

Elmer Keuch, who has been running the Tinley Park market and grocery, has closed shop this week. He and his father ran the business for some time. Seven weeks ago Adam Keuch took sick, and in addition to illness in his own family, Elmer found it too much of a job to keep up the business. He did not have any extra help, and found it impossible to run it all alone. The business was located in the Henry Foster place. It is said that several out-of-town butchers have already sought to rent the place and to open up a market.

Mr. Keuch for the time being will buy up poultry and calves.

Former Tinley Resident Dead

Mrs. Catherine Bettenhausen died at the home of her son Adam in Blue Island Monday. Funeral services were held Wednesday, with burial in the German M. E.
cemetery.

Box of Tut-Ankh-Amen's Underwear

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with Earl of Carnarvon.

Here in the antechamber of his tomb, is the long white wooden box which contained the underwear of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, who reigned in Egypt more than three thousand years ago. It also held many of his weapons. Above it is one of the ceremonial couches, and in the background one of the statues of the king at the sealed doorway of the sepulcher.

Tut-Ankh-Amen's Four Chariots

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with Earl of Carnarvon.
Here are the wheels, bodies, poles and other parts of four chariots as they were found in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor, Egypt. They are made of various hard woods, covered with stucco gilt, leather and inlaid ivory.
The floors are of hide, in one case of leopard skin. Embossed gold panels on one represent the king's prisoners of war.

The Caterpillar Pest.
France, in the middle ages, had a remarkable method of dealing with plagues of caterpillars. In 1120 the
